oceanian ceramic cultures making earthenware pottery spread during the past 3500 years through a dozen major island groups spanning 6000 km of the tropical pacific ocean from western micronesia to western polynesia island potters mixed sand as temper into clay bodies during ceramic manufacture the nature of island sands is governed by the geotectonics of hotspot chains island arcs subduction zones backarc basins and remnant arcs as well as by sedimentology because small islands with bedrock exposures of restricted character are virtual point sources of sand many tempers are diagnostic of specific islands petrographic study of temper sands in thin section allows distinction between indigenous pottery and exotic pottery transported from elsewhere study of 2223 prehistoric oceanian potsherds from 130 islands and island clusters indicates the nature of oceanian temper types and documents 105 cases of interisland transport of ceramics over distances typically there can be little doubt on linguistic evidence that east polynesia was first settled from west polynesia the author argues however that the related archaeological record has been made to fit this dominant paradigm her objective assessment of the material evidence indicates that there is no compelling reason to derive east polynesian settlers from west polynesia on archaeological grounds drawing on archaeology maori oral history european accounts this is a fascinating study of cultural change and development by maori in a single region of new zealand changes through time in the archaeological record of coastal california illuminate complex relationships between human beings and a rich diverse coastal biome with a long and impressive history of coastal archaeology california scholars have a substantial empirical research base from which to address broader issues within the increasingly specialized subfield of maritime anthropology the 16 papers in this volume attempt to explain changes in coastal hunter gatherer behavior through time contributing authors je arnold le christenson jm erlandson d gallegos ma glassow gt gross da jones tl jones d laylander kg lightfoot p martz la payen lm raab ew ritter ra salls r schwaderer dd simons a yatsko dr yesner where the waves fall 1984 centres the stories of the pacific islanders and how they were affected by european explorers and colonisers in this unique account of human settlement and cultural interchange in the pacific islands it follows the fortunes of the seafarers who discovered island after island in the world s largest ocean traces the development of their civilisations and examines in depth the interaction between them and the newcomers european explorers traders beachcombers missionaries merchants who from the sixteenth century came in an increasing series of waves the book s framework enables the author to throw new light on hitherto isolated events novel suggestions are advanced as to why some islands became kingdoms in the earlier years of european contact and why others did not and of how and why missionaries were accepted on some islands but not on others nor does professor howe shrink from provocative and at times controversial arguments concerning the ambitions and strategies of island leaders and indeed the overall nature and extent of the initiatives taken by the islanders this book was originally published in 1984 for over a million years rocks provided human beings with the essential raw materials for the production of tools nevertheless we still know very little about the behaviour and processes that resulted in the creation of archaeological sites at or near lithic quarries in the past archaeologists have placed much emphasis on the process of exchange in their analysis of prehistoric economies while largely ignoring the sources of the exchanged objects however with the development of interest in the means of production these sites have begun to take on a new significance prehistoric quarries and lithic production is the first systematic study of archaeological sites that served as quarries for stone tools its theoretical and methodological importance will extend its appeal beyond those archaeologists concerned with lithic technology and prehistoric exchange systems to archaeologists and anthropologists in general and to geographers and geologists there has been a distinct lack of intensive documentation of the history of the trobriand islands in papua new guinea leaving the origins of the people shrouded in myth reading contemporary chinese migrant fiction examines the spectrum of chinese migrant writing about memory since the 1990s and what it tells us about history memory and trauma in contemporary china drawing on a range of interdisciplinary approaches the book casts new light on texts by writers from the cultural revolution generation including ken liu yiyun li and geling yan among others meng xia demonstrates how these writers construct collective identity in the contexts of transnational experiences of migration and historical trauma the book delves into the possibilities and problems of transposing memory across borders and engages with debates over the unspeakability and politicization of trauma across public and private lines in an important work that forces readers to view history with new eyes ponting shows in compelling detail how over and over human beings throughout history have prospered by exploiting the earth s resources to the point where they could no longer sustain societies populations causing collapse publicity to tie in with earth day april 23rd
