shaw addresses the ethical turn in contemporary sociological thinking by exploring the contribution of sociology and the social sciences to bioethical debates about morality and tissue exchange practices

this book explores a heretofore unremarked linkage between bernard shaw the twentieth century french thinker paul ricoeur and jesus of nazareth the ties that bind them are a foundational interest in the social teachings of the nazarene and their use of a shared dialectics with respect to living the kind of compassionate life that holds out the promise in our contemporary world of achieving something approximating universal wellness on a healthy planet at peace with itself this work argues that the three principal subjects of the study independently of one another used the same dialectical method to reach the same dialectically derived conclusion about how humans can live redemptively in a fractured world an ecological model through which we can imagine Aquinas' vision of moral character the images we use to think about moral character are powerful they inform our understanding of the moral virtues and the ways in which moral character develops however this aspect of virtue ethics is rarely discussed in ecological moral character Nancy M. Rourke creates an ecological model through which we can form images of moral character she integrates concepts of ecology with Aquinas' vision and describes the dynamics of a moral character in terms of the processes and functions that take place in an ecosystem the virtues the passions the will and the intellect are also described in terms of this model ecological moral character asks readers to choose deliberately the models we use to imagine moral character and offers this ecological virtue model as a vital framework for a period of environmental crisis arising from foundations in green and eco consumerism ethical consumption is a multidisciplinary area of research this shortform book presents an expert view of the empirical evidence on ethical consumption incorporating perspectives from marketing psychology and sociology it takes both a historical and a thematic perspective covering definitions of ethical consumption typologies of ethical consumer practices successes brought about from consumer actions and the current challenges it also focuses on the emergence of contemporary perspectives on ethical consumer behaviour from three discrete perspectives those focusing on consumer segmentation the profiling of ethical consumers those which take a psychological approach the decision making processes which underpin ethical consumption and those which are sociological in nature the identities and practices which underpin ethical consumption the book finally synthesises these perspectives in the context of the problems that are often claimed to exist such as the existence of the attitude behaviour gap and provides conclusions which make recommendations for practice and further research it will be of interest to academics and students of marketing consumption and related fields as well as to practitioners and policymakers who want to understand more about the evidence pertaining to ethical consumers what motivates them and how to encourage and educate them to consume more ethically
