how do policymakers businesses and civil society in india approach the challenge of climate change what do they believe global climate negotiations will achieve and how and how are indian political and policy debates internalizing climate change relatively little is known globally about internal climate debate in emerging industrializing countries but what happens in rapidly growing economies like india s will increasingly shape global climate change outcomes this handbook brings together prominent voices from india including policymakers politicians business leaders civil society activists and academics to build a composite picture of contemporary indian climate politics and policy one section lays out the range of positions and substantive issues that shape indian views on global climate negotiations another delves into national politics around climate change a third looks at how climate change is beginning to be internalized in sectoral policy discussions over energy urbanization water and forests the volume is introduced by an essay that lays out the critical issues shaping climate politics in india and its implications for global politics the papers show that within india climate change is approached primarily as a developmental challenge and is marked by efforts to explore how multiple objectives of development equity and climate mitigation can simultaneously be met in addition indian perspectives on climate negotiations are in a state of flux considerations of equity across countries and a focus on the primary responsibility for action of wealthy countries continue to be central but there are growing voices of concern on the impacts of climate change on india how domestic debates over climate governance are resolved in the coming years and the evolution of india s global negotiation stance are likely to be important inputs toward creating shared understandings across countries in the years ahead and identify ways forward this volume on the indian experience with climate change and development is a valuable contribution to both purposes viet nam s dramatic transition and growth in the 1990s have been attributed to a series of reforms known as doi moi which began in the late 1980s economic growth of nearly 8 yearly benefited the poor and reduced poverty from 61 in 1993 to 37 in 1998 the proportionate increases in the incomes of the poorest quintile were appreciably larger than those of the top 20 or 40 of the population this result is at variance with typical findings for other countries which indicate that welfare gains from growth are smallest for the lowest quintile and rise with income group the results for viet nam suggest that the faster the growth rate the lesser becomes the role of distributive factors that directly influence the poor s well being a print on demand report developing countries esp the least developed ones have more to learn from social policies in europe during the early 20th cent than from the elaborate welfare state arrangements after ww2 in addition to macro economic growth and stability the main ambitions must be to fight human deprivation incl illiteracy malnutrition and poor access to water and sanitation in some cases also weak incompetent and or corrupt governments informal systems in the fields of transfers and social services must not be destroyed when developing countries embark on more formal systems the european experience also warns against the creation of social systems that are so generous that disincentives and receding social norms distort the nat economy this paper reviews the history progress of understanding development theory over the past 50 years development thinking has evolved from an early paradigm that focused on savings capital investment to subsequent arguments favoring the inclusion of human capital policy technical change finally to the inclusion of the role of institutions good governance secure property rights in the broadest sense which are applicable to all resources not just land are particularly important to realize investment yield this evolution of development thought describes a conceptual framework that can guide development practitioners in prioritizing sequencing characterizing all interventions aimed at reducing poverty
