in this edited volume an array of scholars has examined recent policymaking efforts in selected areas of contemporary importance government at work policymaking in the twenty first century congress provides chapter length treatment to reveal the similarities and fundamentals of policy development while also illustrating the unique issues and obstacles found in each policy environment this book's scope spans the entire policymaking process exposing the readers to the interaction among all major power centers ranging from interest groups media courts congress the president and the federal bureaucracy it shows the dynamic nature of american policymaking system the approach employed in this book treats events such as congress passing a law or the supreme court announcing a ruling as important steps in the policy process rather than as merely ends unto themselves this volume focuses on major legislation passed by congress since the turn of the century it features one case study per chapter demonstrating how issues rise to the national agenda pass through the congressional labyrinth to become public policies are implemented by the federal bureaucracy receive feedback from affected elements of the society and ultimately evolve over the years health care education welfare law the perceived success or failure of these social institutions is constantly being debated in the public arena in this new book ackoff and rovin examine a variety of these issues and use systems theory to develop solutions for many of the problems society currently faces redesigning the work of human services explores alternative organizational designs for the delivery of human services designs that emphasize collaborative governance and partnerships among public and private agencies local control and responsibility for results and the use of innovative information planning and community capacity building technologies this book redefines the debate about whether human services should be privatized or not the author suggests that the basic task of human services to enable families to socialize the young is one that can neither be fulfilled effectively by the state nor by private agencies rather carefully crafted public private partnerships when combined with new accountability mechanisms and the sophisticated use of emerging information technologies are likely to offer more in the way of effective efficient and appropriate human services because this work is solidly grounded in the literature on both human and business services the author's suggestions for major redesign are comprehensive and intelligently qualified compensation education housing social welfare employment assistance and superannuation recommends higher education reform to meet current problems and future challenges a strategy of decision explores and explain some striking discrepancies between theories of decision making and the observed practices of people who successfully cope with the complex problem solving required in matters of public policy literature survey and annotated bibliography on the relationship between job design and labour productivity covers definitions theoretical approaches organizational policies and practices etc this book examines the fundamental role of politics in funding our public schools and fills a conceptual imbalance in the current literature in school finance and educational policy unlike those who are primarily concerned about cost efficiency kenneth wong specifies how resources are allocated for what purposes at different levels of the government in contrast to those who focus on litigation as a way to reduce funding gaps he underscores institutional stalemate and the lack of political will to act as important factors that affect legislative deadlock in school finance reform wong defines how politics has sustained various types of rules that affect the allocation of resources at the federal state and local level while these rules have been remarkably stable over the past twenty to thirty years they have often worked at cross purposes by fragmenting policy and constraining the education process at schools with the greatest needs wong's examination is shaped by several questions how do these rules come about what role does politics play in retention of the rules do the federal state and local governments espouse different policies in what ways do these policies operate at cross purposes how do they affect educational opportunities do the policies cohere in ways that promote better and more equitable student outcomes wong concludes that the five types of entrenched rules for resource allocation are rooted in existing governance arrangements and seemingly impervious to partisan shifts interest group pressures and constitutional challenge and because these rules foster policy fragmentation and embody initiatives out of step with the performance based reform agenda of the 1990s the outlook for positive change in public education is uncertain unless fairly radical approaches are employed wong also analyzes four allocative reform models two based on the assumption that existing political structures are unlikely to change and two that seek to empower actors at the school level the two models for systemwide restructuring aimed at intergovernmental coordination and or integrated governance would seek to clarify responsibilities for public education among federal state and local authorities above all integrating political and educational accountability the other two models identified by wong shift control from state and district to the school one based on local leadership and the other based on market forces in discussing the guiding principles of the four models wong takes care to identify both the potential and limitations of each written with a broad policy audience in mind wong s book should appeal to professionals interested in the politics of educational reform and to teachers of courses dealing with educational policy and administration and intergovernmental relations highlighting the important innovations embodied in the 1992 national assessment of educational progress naep reading report card this report provides information on how the naep s large scale reading assessment is evolving in response to changing perceptions of reading development and assessment procedures included in the report is an overview of the theoretical framework underlying the assessment a description of and presentation of reading materials used in the assessment a discussion of students performance on constructed response questions and a presentation of example questions major findings discussed in the report include 1 at grades 4 8 and 12 students average performance was highest on multiple choice questions somewhat lower
