are migrant workers needed to do the jobs that locals will not do or are they simply a more exploitable labour force do they have a better work ethic or are they less able to complain is migrant labour the solution to skills shortages or actually part of the problem this book provides a comprehensive framework for analysing the demand for migrant workers in high income countries it demonstrates how a wide range of government policies often unrelated to migration contribute to creating a growing demand for migrant labour this demand can persist even during economic downturns the book includes quantitative and qualitative analyses of the changing role of migrants in the uk economy the empirical chapters include in depth examinations of the nature of staff shortages and the use of migrant workers in six sectors health social care hospitality food production construction and financial services the book s conceptual framework and empirical findings are of importance to academic and policy debates about labour immigration in all high income countries the final chapter presents a comparative analysis of research and policy approaches to assessing labour shortages in the uk and the us it examines the potential lessons of the uk s migration advisory committee mac for current debates about labour shortages and immigration reform in the us the book will be of significant interest to policy makers stakeholders academics and students as the struggle against neoliberalism becomes ever more global just work will be the definitive book on the growing social and political power of one its major forces migrant labor from trade unions in south africa to resistance in oppressive gulf states migrating forest workers in the czech republic and illegal workers organizations in hong kong just work brings together a wealth of lived experiences and frontline struggles for the first time highlighting developments in the wake of austerity and attacks on traditional forms of labor organizing the contributors show how workers are finding new and innovative ways of resisting the result is both a rich analysis of where the movement stands today and a reminder of the potentially explosive power of migrant workers in the years to come what happens when local unions begin to advocate for the rights of temporary migrant workers asks michele ford in her sweeping study of seven asian countries until recently unions in hong kong japan malaysia singapore south korea taiwan and thailand were uniformly hostile towards foreign workers but ford deftly shows how times and attitudes have begun to change now she argues ngos and the global union federations are encouraging local unions to represent and advocate for these peripheral workers and in some cases succeeding from migrant to worker builds our understanding of the role the international labor movement and local unions have had in developing a movement for migrant workers labor rights ford examines the relationship between different kinds of labor movement actors and the constraints imposed on those actors by resource flows contingency and local context her conclusions show that in countries hong kong malaysia and thailand where resource flows and local factors give the global union federations more influence local unions have become much more engaged with migrant workers but in countries japan and taiwan for example where they have little effect there has been little progress while much has changed ford forces us to see that labor migration in asia is still fraught with complications and hardships and that local unions are not always able or willing to act this collection provides insights into international labor migration in the context of globalization through the lens of international law and national law of some asian countries that are the home countries of migrant workers the main focus of the volume is on challenges regarding international labor migration that some developing countries in asia have been confronted with it investigates and determines current situations in some asian developing countries having the majority of overseas migrant workers it also places some emphasis on national regulatory systems of policies and regulations regarding overseas labour migration from those countries in addition in light of the current situation on international labour migration the chapters outlines some recommendations and solutions for those selected developing countries in asia to resolve existing problems to effectively ensure the protection of the rights of overseas labor migrants and governance of international labor migration in accordance with international standards migrant ecologies investigates the ways in which zheng xiaoqiong s poetry exposes the entanglements of migrant ecologies embedded within local and global networks of capital and labor the author contends that women migrant workers in particular as portrayed in zheng s poems are the visible manifestation of the interconnections between the so called factories of the world and slum villages in the city between urban development and rural decline and between the local environmental degradation and the global market by adopting an ecological approach to zheng s poems about women migrant workers in china the author explores what donna haraway calls webbed ecologies 49 the concept of ecologies serves to enhance not only the layered complex interconnections underlying women migrant workers plight and environmental degradation in china but also the emergence and transformation of migrant spaces subjects activism and networks resulting in part from globalization this insightful book discusses how policymakers define migrant workers status and rights at international and national levels assessing the evolution of the language of rights for migrant workers in international law definition of migrant workers in turkish legislation key political and economic factors on turkish migration policies protection mechanisms that safeguard migrant workers rights it critically examines the policymaking processes at international regional and national levels and evaluates the impact of the values such as universal or ethnocentric values on the definitions of status and rights of migrant workers the chapters evaluate the status and rights of migrant workers through the lens of cosmopolitan moral constructivism and examine the law making procedures and illustrate the dynamism of these processes with the inclusion of various conditions and actors the book dissects the key universal and national values that impact on rights of migrant workers this timely book challenges the rising right wing ethnocentric policy approaches to labour migration to migrant workers rights and problematises the existing legal definitions within migration policies that place the rights of migrant workers into a precarious policy sphere by entering the controversial political debate for labour migration and the policy making realm this book is ideal for scholars and researchers of political science international relations and social policy particularly those focusing on international labour migration and migration policies it will further benefit the policymakers and practitioners working on migration such as un agencies ngos civil societies and local authorities asean the association of southeast asian nations has made slow progress in defining a regional policy for the protection of migrant workers this book examines the normative structures within the institutions at play at both state and regional level of asean which influence the making of a migrant workers protection policy the author puts forward a novel alternative policy analysis tool the two level state and regional analysis that enables satisfactory explanation for policy making cases whereby normative institutional structures are involved and social policies are considered the author argues that the formulation of a working coherent migrant workers protection policy has not been achieved because of the presence of normative institutional structures with ideas unsupportive to the protection of migrant workers which results in a slow institutionalisation process although the migrant workers in question are their citizens and migrant sending countries are supposed to have more supportive normative structures for workers protection the author finds that when examined closely institutions in both migrant sending and receiving countries tend to have normative structures that are against workers protection these arguments drive the analytical questions of the book to inquire about the forms of the normative structures involved and their influence in the relevant institutions a unique contribution to the study of asean and migration in southeast asia this book will be of interest to academics in the field of social policy migration studies and asian studies in particular southeast asian studies
