southern workers and the search for community is the first major effort to interpret the enduring legacy of the southern textile industry company owned mill villages and the union struggles of the 1930s focusing on spartanburg county south carolina g c waldrep offers an eloquent study of the hopes and fears that define patterns of labor activism revealing a complex meshing of community ties and traditions with the goals and ideals of unionism waldrep shows how unions fed into a social vision of mutuality equality and interdependency already established in mill villages this powerful sense of community however ultimately rested on sand because the villages themselves were the property of management any labor conflict involved not only issues of wages hours and working conditions inside the mill but also virtually every other aspect of life most important the mill owners held the trump card of eviction waldrep looks beyond official versions of union activity in spartanburg county to explain the episodic and apparently erratic eruptions of labor tensions and intervening periods of calm drawing on private records of textile workers their employers and their unions during the 1930s and 1940s as well as more than a hundred oral interviews with workers waldrep reinterprets the periods of quiescence that have long puzzled historians documenting the high stakes of labor protest in mill villages waldrep shows how the erosion or outright destruction of community systematically undermined the ability of workers to respond to the assaults of employers overwhelmingly supported by government agencies and agents beautifully written and persuasively argued southern workers and the search for community opens the gates of southern company towns to illuminate the human issues behind the mechanics of labor
