the crime that pays is a study of higher level drug syndicates and organized criminals who have achieved huge incomes and status in their deviant occupation based on interviews with drug couriers drug investigators and 70 higher level drug traffickers the book describes the characteristics of offenders their modus operandi the entrepreneurial aspects of organized crime and the significance of friendship kinship race and ethnicity in the development of criminal networks most of the dealers in this study operated at the wholesale level for years had realized huge profits and lived extravagant lifestyles for many their arrest occurred only after the police had undertaken a sophisticated and proactive criminal investigation that took years to complete included in the text are an analysis of the police strategies used to combat drug trafficking and the social policy implications from this and other research studies the book includes original research both on the rcmp and on higher level drug trafficking also included are analyses of canadian drug laws and a critique of social policy relating to drug use and drug trafficking

the twenty six articles in this edited volume provide perspective on the interrelated issues surrounding the use of drugs in society although drugs have long been a social problem the importance of the issue and the involvement of the criminal justice system have varied across time public concern has typically centered on illegal drugs but the drug issue today is even more complex given the impact of prescription drugs exaggeration has been a constant theme in the history of public policy on drugs usually playing on public fear to demonize specific drugs and users some drugs are more dangerous than others the variations in effects impact enforcement prevention and treatment if we are going to criminalize drugs and drug usage policies and penalties should be based on the relative dangerousness of a drug or class of drugs policies can reduce harm create harm or both our current drug policies attempt to reduce harm through law enforcement we arrest anyone involved in drug activities under the premise of protecting society these same policies however result in the incarceration of large numbers of people they are expensive they overburden the criminal justice system and they have lasting consequences for those caught up in the drug war no matter how minor their offenses drug policies should be weighed carefully implementing those that result in the least amount of harm to society the editors have collected timely articles that provide perspective and a foundation for an informed approach to addressing problems associated with drug use why even in the same high crime neighborhoods do robbery drug dealing and assault occur much more frequently on some blocks than on others one popular theory is that a weak sense of community among neighbors can create conditions more hospitable for criminals and another proposes that neighborhood disorder such as broken windows and boarded up buildings makes crime more likely but in his innovative new study peter k b st jean argues that we cannot fully understand the impact of these factors without considering that because urban space is unevenly developed different kinds of crimes occur most often in locations that offer their perpetrators specific advantages drawing on chicago police department statistics and extensive interviews with both law abiding citizens and criminals in one of the city s highest crime areas st jean demonstrates that drug dealers and robbers for example are primarily attracted to locations with businesses like liquor stores fast food restaurants and check cashing outlets by accounting for these important factors of spatial positioning he expands upon previous research to provide the most comprehensive explanation available of why crime occurs where it does
