what do we really want from schools only everything in all its contradictions most of all we want access and opportunity for all children but all possible advantages for our own so argues historian david labaree in this provocative look at the way this archetype of dysfunction works so well at what we want it to do even as it evades what we explicitly ask it to do ever since the common school movement of the nineteenth century mass schooling has been seen as an essential solution to great social problems yet as wave after wave of reform movements have shown schools are extremely difficult to change labaree shows how the very organization of the locally controlled administratively limited school system makes reform difficult at the same time he argues the choices of educational consumers have always overwhelmed top down efforts at school reform individual families seek to use schools for their own purposes to pursue social opportunity if they need it and to preserve social advantage if they have it in principle we want the best for all children in practice we want the best for our own provocative unflinching wry someone has to fail looks at the way that unintended consequences of consumer choices have created an extraordinarily resilient educational system perpetually expanding perpetually unequal constantly being reformed and never changing much an in depth look at the rising american generation entering the black professional class despite their diversity black americans have long been studied as a uniformly disadvantaged group drawing from a representative sample of over a thousand black students and in depth interviews and focus groups with over one hundred more young gifted and diverse highlights diversity among the new educated black elite those graduating from america s selective colleges and universities in the early twenty first century differences in childhood experiences shape this generation including their racial and other social identities and attitudes and beliefs about and interactions with one another while those in the new black elite come from myriad backgrounds and have varied views on american racism as they progress through college and toward the black professional class they develop a shared worldview and group consciousness they graduate with optimism about their own futures but remain guarded about racial equality more broadly this internal diversity alongside political consensus among the elite complicates assumptions about both a monolithic black experience and the future of black political solidarity
