comprised of papers written by members of the social science research council subcommittee on child development in life span perspective this book provides a representation of the current status of the relation between child development and the life span it suggests the possible synthesis of these two fields from both conceptual and empirical evidence theories and methods concerning the social psychological and anatomical influences on children s cognitive development through adolescence are highlighted the final volume in this significant series this publication mirrors the broad scientific attention given to ideas and issues associated with the life span perspective constancy and change in human development opportunities for and constraints on plasticity in structure and function across life the potential for intervention across the entire life course and thus for the creation of an applied developmental science individual differences diversity in life paths in contexts or the ecology of human development and in changing relations between people and contexts interconnections and discontinuities across age levels and developmental periods and the importance of integrating biological psychological social cultural and historical levels of organization in order to understand human development traditionally developmental psychology has its focus on individuals developmentalists aim to describe regularities in individuals change and development across time to explain the processes and mechanisms that are involved in producing change and regularity and eventually to design strategies for optimization and modification of developmental pathways although the role of contexts has always been of central concern for these purposes it is nevertheless quite surprising to note that compared to the effort devoted to individuals relatively little attention has been paid to the study of the nature and organization of their contexts this volume is an exploration of the idea that how we describe and explain human development will be closely tied to our understanding of what contexts are how individuals and contexts become influential for one another what contexts do to and with individuals and how contexts and their influences change themselves across time a major theme is whether the traditional dichotomy between individuals and their contexts may be artificial perhaps culturally biased and after psychologists have adhered to it for about a century may have become an impediment to increasing our understanding of developmental processes with this volume the editors contribute a serious consideration of development and systematic change to emerging models of person context relations and provide suggestions about how it may be possible to incorporate these notions in developmental research and theorizing
