Russia possesses one of the richest and most admired literatures of Europe reaching back to the eleventh century. A history of Russian literature provides a comprehensive account of Russian writing from its earliest origins in the monastic works of Kiev up to the present day still rife with the creative experiments of post-soviet literary life. The volume proceeds chronologically in five parts extending from Kievan Rus in the 11th century to the present day. The coverage strikes a balance between extensive overview and in-depth thematic focus. Parts are organized thematically in chapters which contain a number of keywords that are important literary concepts that can serve as connecting motifs and case studies in depth. Discussions of writers, institutions, and texts that take the reader up close and personal. Visual material also underscores the interrelation of the word and image at a number of points particularly significant in the medieval period and twentieth century. The history addresses major continuities and discontinuities in the history of Russian literature across all periods and in particular brings out trans-historical features that contribute to the notion of a national literature. The volume's time range has the merit of identifying from the early modern period a vital set of national stereotypes and popular folklore about boundaries, space, holy Russia and the charismatic king that offers culturally relevant material to later writers. This volume delivers a fresh view on a series of key questions about Russia's literary history by providing new mappings of literary history and a narrative that pursues key concepts rather than individual authorial careers. This holistic narrative underscores the ways in which context and text are densely woven in Russian literature and demonstrates that the most exciting way to understand the canon and the development of tradition is through a discussion of the interrelation of major and minor figures, historical events and literary politics, literary theory and literary innovation.

excerpt from russian literature this book originated in a series of eight lectures on russian literature during the nineteenth century which i delivered in march 1901 at the lowell institute in boston in accepting the invitation to deliver this course i fully realised the difficulties which stood in my way it is by no means an easy task to speak or to write about the literature of a country when this literature is hardly known to the audience or to the readers only three or four russian writers have been properly and at all completely translated into english so that very often i had to speak about a poem or a novel when it could have been readily characterised by simply reading a passage or two from it however if the difficulties were great the subject was well worth an effort russian literature is a rich mine of original poetic thought it has a freshness and youthfulness which is not found to the same extent in older literatures it has moreover a sincerity and simplicity of expression which render it all the more attractive to the mind that has grown sick of literary artificiality and it has this distinctive feature that it brings within the domain of art the poem the novel the drama nearly all those questions social and political which in western europe and america at least in our present generation are discussed chiefly in the political writings of the day but seldom in literature in no other country docs literature occupy so influential a position as it does in russia nowhere else docs it exercise so profound and so direct an influence upon the intellectual development of the younger generation about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works book excerpt fort so in russia great authors are in well nigh painful abundance and the student is embarrassed not with the difficulty of selecting from the midst of poverty but with the difficulty of selecting from the midst of riches and not only is its aspect that of a hot house but its very character has been affected such is the intensity of the national spirit of russia that it can do well but one thing at a time and all its strength can go into only one literary form at a time from 1800 to 1835 russian literature is like a field on a midsummer evening full of all manner of musical sound and whatever hath articulate voice does nothing but sing batushkof sings pushkin sings lermontof sings koltsof sings turgenef versifies and zhukofsky like our own poetasters balances himself acrobatically in metrical stanzas and where the gift of song is wanting it shrieks and screeches but always observe in well balanced rhymes then comes the era of the thick periodicals and whatever is gifted in russia f read more
