Preface The relationship a country maintains with its neighbours is very important. If the relationship is good, it can be a source of strength; otherwise, it can lead to destruction. India is a peninsula sharing its borders with several nations. Of all these neighbouring countries, China is most important economically, politically, and strategically. Moreover, recently, China has become the centre of discussion for the entire world. Not only for India, the People's Republic of China, also called as China in short, was founded in 1949. Today, in 2020, in a very short period, it has become a superpower. It is very important for us to understand how China grew so fast in such a short period of time. Looking at the mind set of its leaders and the policies they implemented might help us understand how to improve our own nation. Keeping these things in mind, I have written this short book to explore China's growth. When I started on this journey, I found that the information was scattered, complex, and difficult for the layman to understand. I have therefore tried to keep the content short and the language simple and lucid in order to share this information with a wide audience. Minakshi Goel

Today, by many accounts, China is the world's foremost purveyor of foreign aid and foreign investment to developing countries. This is the product of China's miracle economic growth over a period of more than three decades, together with China's drive to become a major player in world affairs and accomplish this through economic rather than military means. This three-volume work is the first comprehensive study of China's aid and investment strategy to trace how it has evolved since Beijing launched its foreign aid diplomacy at the time of the founding of the People's Republic of China in 1949. Volume I examines the definitions, origins, nature, and scope of foreign aid and investment by other countries using that background. John F. Copper then traces China's financial assistance to developing countries from the Mao period, when China gave meaningful foreign aid despite its own economic struggles, through the beginning of China's post-1978 economic boom and during subsequent decades of rapid economic growth. Copper shows that China has a more salient history in giving foreign assistance than any other country in the world while china's objectives in giving foreign assistance have changed markedly over time china has always been driven by efforts to realize its foreign policy objectives and expand china's external influence
