national identity has been the subject of much controversy and debate some have even suggested dropping the concept entirely one group essentialists argue that national identity is fixed cultural based on birth and ancestry another viewpoint is posited by postmodernists who argue that national identity is malleable invented or imagined as alternatives some have suggested that national identity is a hybrid of both essentialist and postmodernist views and still others bypass this argument and suggest that national identity should be based on civic factors such as shared values and norms about citizenship while controversy and debate are healthy exercises in any science at some point order must be established if science is to proceed the present volume is based on the idea that national identity is an ideal type concept it does not completely capture reality but is used for analytic purposes in addition rather than focusing on these theoretical debates we pursue research with the idea that results from research will contribute to the field of national identity three areas of national identity are discussed theoretical national and individual two chapters focus on the major theories about national identity provide critiques and make suggestions about the topic in section two six chapters provide case studies of national identity on scotland ireland russia bosnia herzegovina germany and france in section three two case studies focus on immigrants and the challenges they face in forming their identities especially identifying with their host countries belgium and the united kingdom several important conclusions may be gleaned from the contributions of the present volume to begin with while national identity is a slippery concept if the field wishes to move beyond debate about fundamentals it would be well advised to view the concept as an ideal type as suggested by the great german scholar max weber secondly the case studies included in the present volume indicate that national identity is not only based on ethnicity and culture but on such external factors as governance regimes and their changes economic crises wars and other forms of aggressive activity and social demographic changes in a population these factors affect a population at the national level for immigrants at the individual level developing national identity is greatly affected by four interrelated factors 1 the degree to which they are accepted by members of the host society 2 immigrants language skills and physical appearances 3 how well they are able to balance their host national identity their ethnic identity and acceptance of their native country 4 and their generational status generally at the national and individual levels context and circumstances matter in developing national identity a good political community is one whose citizens are actively engaged in deciding their common future together bound together by ties of national solidarity they discover and implement principles of justice that all can share and in doing so they respect the separate identities of minority groups within the community in the essays collected in this book david miller shows that such an ideal is not only desirable but feasible he explains how active citizenship on the republican model differs from liberal citizenship and why it serves disadvantaged groups better than currently fashionable forms of identity politics by deliberating freely with one another citizens can reach decisions on matters of public policy that are both rational and fair he couples this with a robust defence of the principle of nationality arguing that a shared national identity is necessary to motivate citizens to work together in the name of justice attempts to create transnational forms of citizenship in europe and elsewhere are therefore misguided he shows that the principle of nationality can accommodate the demands of minority nations and does not lead to a secessionist free for all and finally he demonstrates that national self determination need not be achieved at the expense of global justice this is a powerful statement from a leading political theorist that not only extends our understanding of citizenship nationality and deliberative democracy but engages with current political debates about identity politics minority nationalisms and european integration
