in meaningful pasts russell johnston and michael ripmeester explore two strands of identity making among residents of the niagara region in ontario canada first they describe the region s official narratives most of which celebrate the achievements of white settlers with a mix of storytelling rituals and monuments despite their presence in local lore and landmarks these official narratives did not resonate with the nearly one thousand residents who participated in five surveys conducted over eleven years instead participants drew on contemporary people places and events second the authors explore the emergence of niagara s wine industry as a heritage narrative the book shares how the survey participants embraced the industry as a local identifier and indicates how the industry s efforts have rekindled the residents interest in agriculture as a significant element of regional heritage and local identities revealing how the profiles of local narratives and commemorations become entwined with social cultural economic and political power meaningful pasts illuminates the fact that local narratives retain their relevance only if residents find them meaningful in their day to day lives this volume contains recommendations for the true institutionalisation of sustainable development as a result there is little applicability internationally even less interdisciplinary work and at times an outright bias against the market economy as such the commission report is even handed tough minded and frank in discussing how it is that social science and new social and technical forces do not always mesh the optimism exuded is measured but genuine great expectations offers policy recommendations and scientific goals that can be serviceable not only in the united kingdom but in all advanced societies in which social research is a central component of economic stability and development it is a superb reference volume enriched by original analysis and pungent clear headed writing members of the commission include professor david rhind vice chancellor of the city university served as chairman of the commission grunden s analysis of this fundamental flaw in the japanese war effort seamlessly weaves together science technology and military history to provide an entirely unique look at a crucial but understudied aspect of world war ii comparing the science and weapons programs of all the major combatants he demonstrates that japan s failure was nearly inevitable given its paucity of strategic resources an inadequate industrial base the absence of effective centralized management to coordinate research military hostility toward civilian scientists and bitter interservice rivalries in the end japan could not overcome these obstacles and thus failed to make the transition to the kind of big science it needed to ward off its enemies and dominate the far east book jacket the author makes an argument for clemency in judging hollywood s interpretations of history and thoroughly investigates its serious limitations and opportunities to construe history the current situation with regard to the use of high performance composites is one of seeking a reliable means of characterizing the fundamental properties and or behavior of composite materials the employment of such materials in vi tal structural applications require criteria as part of the materials selection and design procedures however the principal limitation of the many currently available procedures most of which were borrowed from the metal i ndustry is its intrinsic restriction to single phase materials they cannot adequately ac count for the variations in the constituents or structure of the composite that can have a significant influence on its gross behavior although a considerable amount of research has been conducted in the past with the objective of under standing composite material behavior for the most part the research efforts tended to cover too wide a spectrum of problems with little penetration into the fundamental aspects for this reason the investigators in this field have long felt the need to bring together a small group of experts to review the fun damentals discuss the problem areas and display the current developments the usa ussr sympo on the f ct e 06 compo e mat was organized for this purpose there is the additional need to share this information with the new comers to the field as well as the oldtimers this is accomplished by publish ing the symposium proceedings contained in the present volume a russian trans lation of the papers in this volume will also be made available
