teaching experiment i had just completed work on the book construction of arithmetical meanings and strategies with paul cobb and ernst von glasersfeld and felt that substantial progress had been made in understanding the early numerical experiences of the six children who were the subjects of study in that book while the book was in preparation i was also engaged in the teaching experiment on multiplying and dividing algorithms my focus in this teaching experiment was on investigating the mathematical experiences of the involved children and on developing a language through which those experiences might be expressed however prior to immersing myself in the conceptual analysis of the mathematical experiences of the children i felt that it was crucial to critically evaluate the progress that we felt we had made in our earlier work it was toward achieving this goal that i organized the conference when trying to understand the mathematical experiences of a child one can do no better than to interact with the child in a mathematical context guided by the intention to specify the child s current knowledge and the progress the child might make working with selected miracles of jesus from the canonical gospel traditions and with background studies in the general understanding of miracles in the greco roman world of the hellenistic period this collection of essays shows how we may understand the theological reasons why the early followers of jesus included these stories in their traditions that constituted the canonical gospels using individual stories from the gospels three of the essays demonstrate how literary critical analysis can show the theological intent of the miracle story a second set of three essays examines the way mark and luke view the miracle tradition within their larger task of writing the story of jesus a final set of three articles examines the hellenistic background of such stories and the way they were used in secular and jewish sources to gain perspective on what the early christians intended with the miracle stories of jesus
