the financial and economic collapse that began in the united states in 2008 and spread to the rest of the world continues to burden the global economy david kotz who was one of the few academic economists to predict it argues that the ongoing economic crisis is not simply the aftermath of financial panic and an unusually severe recession but instead is a structural crisis of neoliberal or free market capitalism consequently continuing stagnation cannot be resolved by policy measures alone it requires major institutional restructuring kotz analyzes the reasons for the rise of free market ideas policies and institutions beginning around 1980 he shows how the neoliberal capitalism that resulted was able to produce a series of long although tepid economic expansions punctuated by relatively brief recessions as well as a low rate of inflation this created the impression of a great moderation however the very same factors that promoted long expansions and low inflation growing inequality an increasingly risk seeking financial sector and a series of large asset bubbles were not only objectionable in themselves but also put the economy on an unsustainable trajectory kotz interprets the current push for austerity as an attempt to deepen and preserve neoliberal capitalism however both economic theory and history suggest that neither austerity measures nor other policy adjustments can bring another period of stable economic expansion kotz considers several possible directions of economic restructuring concluding that significant economic change is likely in the years ahead
