Explanations of how identities are constructed are fundamental to contemporary debates in feminism and in cultural and social theory. Formations of class gender demonstrates why class should be featured more prominently in theoretical accounts of gender identity and power. Beverley Skeggs identifies the neglect of class and shows how class and gender must be fused together to produce an accurate representation of power relations in modern society. The book questions how theoretical frameworks are generated for understanding how women live and produce themselves through social and cultural relations. It uses detailed ethnographic research to explain how real women inhabit and occupy the social and cultural positions of class femininity and sexuality as a critical examination of cultural representation informed by recent feminist theory and the work of Pierre Bourdieu. The book is an articulate demonstration of how to translate theory into practice.

Drawing on interviews with nurses, social workers, exotic dancers, and hairdressers, this book explores the processes involved in producing and reproducing gendered and classed workers and occupations.

Through the lens of modern Chinese literature, Gender Politics in Modern China explores the relationship between gender and modernity, notions of the feminine and masculine, and shifting arguments for gender equality in China, ranging from interviews with contemporary writers to historical accounts of gendered writing in Taiwan and semi-colonial China. To close feminist readings of individual authors, these essays confront the degree to which textual strategies construct notions of gender. Among the specific themes discussed are how femininity is produced in texts by allocating women to domestic space; the extent to which textual production lies at the base of a changing, historically specific code of the feminine; the extent to which women in modern Chinese societies are products of literary canons; the ways in which the historical processes of gendering have operated in Chinese modernity vis-à-vis modernity in the West; the representation of feminists as avengers and as westernized women; and the meager recognition of feminism as a serious intellectual current. A large body of theory, originally published as a special issue of Modern Chinese Literature, Spring/Fall 1988, this expanded book represents some of the most compelling new work in post-Mao feminist scholarship and will appeal to all those concerned with understanding a revitalized feminism in the Chinese context.
