this collection engages with key questions in panel study research by exploring more deeply the interrelationship between the individual and the community and the impact on language change across the lifespan the book is organized around four broad themes each followed by a forward looking commentary that ties together the key findings from the individual chapters the first section examines style and socio indexicality with the goal of disentangling short term style shifting from long term language change the second section continues with a focus on style examining audience design and socially meaningful variation in professional settings as an integral component of age and role appropriate behavior the third section considers different language dialect contact scenarios and the impact on changing social identities and behavioural norms which can fluctuate across the lifespan for different settings and life stages and for different types of variables the final section explores a computational agent based model of lifespan and community change targeting the practical challenges often encountered in panel research such as data sparsity and the short duration of the human lifespan a postscript underscores the importance of considering style and setting as integral aspects of panel research rather than as afterthoughts and of leveraging computational modeling to expand our understanding of the interdependencies between lifespan and community change this book will appeal to scholars interested in language variation and change sociolinguistics historical linguistics and computational linguistics

this book presents a range of methodological approaches and case studies that illustrate the interconnection of language culture and social practice it is useful for anyone exploring the relation of language to psychology political theory feminist studies and literature and folklore today s interest in social history and private life is often seen as a twentieth century innovation most often lucien febvre and the annales school in france are credited with making social history a widely accepted way for historians to approach the past in lost worlds historian jonathan dewald shows that we need to look back further in time into the nineteenth century when numerous french intellectuals developed many of the key concepts that historians employ today according to dewald we need to view febvre and other annales historians as participants in an ongoing cultural debate over the shape and meanings of french history rather than as inventors of new topics of study he closely examines the work of charles augustin sainte beuve hippolyte taine the antiquarian alfred franklin febvre himself the twentieth century historian philippe ariès and several others a final chapter compares specifically french approaches to social history with those of german historians between 1930 and 1970 through such close readings dewald looks beyond programmatic statements of historians intentions to reveal how history was actually practiced during these years a bold work of intellectual history lost worlds sheds much needed light on how contemporary ideas about the historian s task came into being understanding this larger context enables us to appreciate the ideological functions performed by historical writing through the twentieth century
