from a near standing start in the 1970s the emergence and expansion of an aesthetically and culturally distinctive scottish cinema proved to be one of the most significant developments within late twentieth and early twenty first century british film culture individual scottish films and filmmakers have attracted notable amounts of critical attention as a result the new scottish cinema however is the first book to trace scottish film culture s industrial creative and critical evolution in comprehensive detail across a forty year period on the one hand it invites readers to reconsider the known films such as shallow grave ratcatcher the magdalene sisters young adam red road and the last king of scotland on the other it uncovers the overlooked from the 1980s comedic film makers who followed in the footsteps of bill forsyth to the variety of present day scottish film making a body of work that encompasses explorations of multiculturalism exploitation of the macabre and much else in between in addition to analysing an eclectic range of films and filmmakers the new scottish cinema also examines the diverse industrial institutional and cultural contexts which have allowed scottish film to evolve and grow since the 1970s and relates these to the images of scotland which artists have put on screen in so doing the book narrates a story of interest to any student of contemporary british film this important anthology addresses established notions about third cinema theory and the cinema practice of developing and postcolonial nations the third cinema movement called for a politicised film making practice in africa asia and latin america one which would take on board issues of race class religion and national integrity the films which resulted from the movement from directors such as ousmane sembene satyajit ray and nelson pereira dos santos are among the most culturally significant politically sophisticated and frequently studied films of the 1960s and 1970s however despite the contemporary popularity and critical attention enjoyed by films from asia and latin america in particular third cinema and third cinema theory appears to have lost its momentum rethinking third cinema seeks to bring third cinema and third cinema theory back into the critical spotlight the contributors address the most difficult and challenging questions third cinema poses suggesting new methodologies and redirections of existing ones crucially they also re examine the entire phenomenon of film making in a fast vanishing third world with case studies of the cinemas of india iran and hong kong among others this book deals with the growth of cinema going in scotland in an extended scholarly manner integrating the study of cinema into wider debates in social and economic history this book brings together nine original chapters to examine genre agency in east asian cinema within the transnational context it addresses several urgent and pertinent issues such as the distribution and exhibition practices of east asian genre films intra regional creative flow of screen culture and genre s creative response to censorship the volume expands the scholarly discussion of the rich heritage and fast changing landscape of filmmaking in east asian cinemas confronting the complex interaction between genres filmic narrative and aesthetics film history and politics and cross cultural translation this book not only reevaluates genre s role in film production distribution and consumption but also tackles several under explored areas in film studies and transnational cinema such as the history of east asian commercial cinema the east asian film industry and cross media and cross market film dissemination narratives of place link people and geographic location with a cultural imaginary through literature and visual narration contemporary literature and film often frame narratives with specific geographic locations which saturate the narrative with cultural meanings in relation to natural and man made landscapes this interdisciplinary collection seeks to interrogate such connections to probe how place is narrativized in literature and film utilizing close readings of specific filmic and literary texts all chapters serve to tease out cultural and historical meanings in respect of human engagement with landscapes always mindful of national cultural and topographical specificity the book is structured around five core themes contested histories of place environmental landscapes cityscapes the social construction of place and landscapes of belonging reframing the past traces what historians have written about film and television from 1898 until the early 2000s mia treacey argues that historical engagement with film and television should be reconceptualised as screened history an interdisciplinary international field of research to incorporate and replace what has been known as history and film it draws from the fields of film television and cultural studies to critically analyse key works and connect past scholarship with contemporary research reconsidered as screened history the works of pierre sorlin marc ferro john o connor robert rosenstone and robert toplin are explored alongside lesser known but equally important contributions this book identifies a number of common themes and ideas that have been explored by historians for decades the use of history on film and television as a way to teach the past the challenge of filmic and televisual history to more traditional historiography and an ongoing battle to find an appropriate historical way to engage with film studies and theory screened history offers an approach to exploring history film and television that allows room for future developments while connecting them to a rich and diverse body of past scholarship combining a narrative of historical research on film and television over the past century with a reconceptualisation of the field as screened history reframing the past is essential reading both for established scholars of history and film film history and other related disciplines and to students new to the field
