in nine lively essays bioethicist j david velleman challenges the prevailing consensus about assisted suicide and reproductive technology articulating an original approach to the ethics of creating and ending human lives he argues that assistance in dying is appropriate only at the point where talk of suicide is not and he raises moral objections to anonymous donor conception in their place velleman champions a morality of valuing personhood over happiness in making end of life decisions and respecting the personhood of future children in making decisions about procreation these controversial views are defended with philosophical rigor while remaining accessible to the general reader written over velleman s 30 years of undergraduate teaching in bioethics the essays have never before been collected and made available to a non academic audience they will open new lines of debate on issues of intense public interest people tend to rank values of all kinds linearly from good to bad but there is little reason to think that this is reasonable or correct this book argues to the contrary that values are often partially ordered and hence frequently incomparable proceeding logically from a small set of axioms john nolt examines the great variety of partially ordered value structures exposing fallacies that arise from overlooking them he reveals various ways in which incomparability is obscured using linear indices to summarize partially ordered data relying on an inadequately defined concept of parity or conflating incomparability with vagueness incomparability can enrich and clarify a range of topics including the paradoxes of derek parfit rational decision theory and the infinite values of theology finally nolt shows how to generalize many of the concepts introduced earlier explores the intricate depths of certain noteworthy partially ordered value structures and argues for the finitude of value incomparable values will be of interest to scholars and advanced students
