this book explores the relationship between tourism culture and ethnic identity in tibet in focusing in particular on shangrila a tibetan region in southwest china to show how local tibetan culture is reconstructed as a marketable commodity for tourists it analyses the socio economic effects of shangrila tourism in tibet investigating who benefits economically whilst also considering its political implications and the ways in which tourism might be linked to the negotiation and reassertion of ethnic identity it goes on to examine the spatial re imagining provoked by the development of tourism and asks whether a tourist destination inevitably becomes a pseudo community for the visited can a fictitious name invented for the sake of tourists still provide the natives of a place with a sense of identity this book argues that conceptions of place are closely linked to notions of social identity and in the case of shangrila particularly to ethnic identity viewing the spatial as socially constructed and place making as vital to social organisation this is a study of how place is constructed and contested it describes how local villagers and monastic elites have negotiated the area s religious geography how agents of the communist state have redefined it as a minority area and how tourism developers are now marketing the region as shangrila for tourist consumption it outlines the different place making strategies utilised by the various social actors including local villagers to create the communities in which they live monastic elites to invent a buddhist tibetan realm of religious geography agents of the people s republic of china to define the area as part of the communist state and tourism developers to market the region as shangrila for tourist consumption overall this book is an insightful account of the complex links between tourism culture and tibetan ethnic identity in tibet and will be of interest to a wide range of disciplines including social anthropology sociology human geography tourism and development studies in shambhala roerich has recorded the way of his journey through central asia and tibet in the terms of spirit it is a record of legends of parables of notes the very substance of which the larger reality is composed and all revealing different facets of the theme of shambhala in this book as in his other books altai himalaya and heart of asia one realizes that roerich s vision is manifold traveling on his way he discerns all the beauty of the natural spectacle through which he passes and in his works as in his paintings he records this panorama in successive sparks which flow into a continuous pageantry but in addition roerich perceives also that subtler manifestation of the countries and peoples through which he journeys he discerns their thoughts he perceives the pulsating throbbing hopes and beliefs that sweep like winds across space and it is this record so little visible to the many of us that becomes the vital force of roerich s message one must remark the style of roerich it has the unrepeatable quality and synthesis of life he transmits to us the essentials and we discern that these fragments of seeming fantasy are weaving themselves into a pattern of essential truth and essential beauty roerich has named this book shambhala advisedly reading it one realizes that roerich has woven a wreath which he has offered in full reverence to the great principle which is shambhala the new era for truly it is the salutary wind of people's thought and faith which will aid the fires of shambhala and once again as in all the deeds of his inexhaustible creative fervor roerich's shambhala pronounces the evocation of the fires of new human achievement and a new human destiny
