Classical Christian theologies came to expression at a time when the universe seemed relatively fixed and unchanging the otherworldly spiritual instincts of many religions reflected a static vertical and hierarchical understanding of the natural world today however especially because of developments in the sciences it appears that the universe is still coming into being the writings offered in this book reflect their author's belief that if the universe is unfinished new thoughts about God and all the traditional theological topics are essential to make sense of it all John Haught argues that the universe is best understood according to the metaphor of drama rather than design this means that the most important question in science and theology today is not whether the intricate complexity of life points to a deity or even how God acts in nature but whether the cosmic drama as a whole carries a meaning unfortunately the devotional life of most religious people on our planet still presupposes an essentially immobile universe Christian instruction for example continues to nurture an otherworldly piety that estranges nature unnecessarily from God the readings in this book however suggest that the ancient abrahamic hope for the coming of God from out of the future may now become the foundation of a scientifically up to date theology of nature that affirms divine transcendence without robbing nature of its significance
