interdisciplinary perspectives on landscape from the philosophical to the geographical with an emphasis on the overarching concept of place this volume explores the conceptual topography of landscape it examines the character of landscape as itself a mode of place as well as the modes of place that appear in relation to landscape leading scholars from a range of disciplines explore the concept of landscape including its supposed relation to the spectatorial its character as time space its relation to indigenous notions of country and its liminality they examine landscape as it appears within a variety of contexts from geography through photography and garden history to theology and more specific studies look at the forms of landscape in medieval landscape painting film and television and in relation to national identity the essays demonstrate that the study of landscape cannot be restricted to any one genre cannot be taken as the exclusive province of any one discipline and cannot be exhausted by any single form of analysis what the place of landscape now evokes is itself a wide ranging terrain encompassing issues concerning the nature of place of human being in place and of the structures that shape such being and are shaped by it offers a new approach to landscape perception this book is an extended photographic essay about topographic features of the landscape it integrates philosophical approaches to landscape perception with anthropological studies of the significance of the landscape in small scale societies this perspective is used to examine the relationship between prehistoric sites and their topographic settings the author argues that the architecture of neolithic stone tombs acts as a kind of camera lens focussing attention on landscape features such as rock outcrops river valleys mountain spurs in their immediate surroundings these monuments played an active role in socializing the landscape and creating meaning in it a phenomenology of landscape is unusual in that it links two types of publishing which have remained distinct in archaeology books with atmospheric photographs of monuments with a minimum of text and no interpretation and the academic text in which words provide a substitute for visual imagery attractively illustrated with many photographs and diagrams it will appeal to anyone interested in prehistoric monuments and landscape as well as students and specialists in archaeology anthropology and human geography reception perception and interpretation are key to understanding landscapes this book provides a useful starting point for comprehension of these topics dr stuart prior university of bristol
