this thesis is an ethnographic study of the brahma kumaris world spiritual university brahma kumaris the brahma kumaris is a millenarian new religious movement nrm established in northwest india in the 1930s in 2009 and is located in more than 120 countries i define members bks of the brahma kumaris as social ascetics bks live a life of rigorous purity based around their central practice of meditation the disciplines of these social ascetics are designed to free the mind through mastery over the body culminating in self sovereignty while some bks live in ashrams in moderately cloistered communities most live at home with their families and conduct normal lives according to their environment culture and circumstances for this reason bks endure and moderate unique tensions as they arbitrate leading a life that is spiritually meaningful while maintaining authentic relationships and fulfilling their worldly responsibilities over a period of fifteen months i conducted fieldwork in new york usa and orissa india in an attempt to understand how bks actualize their beliefs in traumatic circumstances through a variety of disasters including a flood cyclone and act of terrorism as well as personal battles and a case of spirit possession bk theology rests on the belief that each person is an immutable conscious and inherently valuable eternal and immortal soul an infinitesimal point of light that dwells in the forehead of the physical costume of the body originally pure and embodying peaceful and joyous states of awareness all souls have gradually lost their original purity and associated happiness and peace through taking rebirth in the physical world bks believe the world we live in today is the result of that spiritual demise the present time in which humanity is living is the time when the lowest and highest points of human and environmental history converge and is known as the age of confluence or sangamyuga it culminates in liberation pea
