our age has become a time of spiritual hunger the Jesus movement the charismatic revival the growth of conservative churches and the upsurge of belief in the imminence of the second coming are some of the signs of this spiritual hunger Georgia Harkness believes that these movements lack a clear understanding of the life giving personal and social relevance of the kingdom of God supporting the wide agreement that the kingdom of God is at the heart of the message of Jesus Dr Harkness carefully examines what the Bible says about the kingdom she surveys the major interpretations throughout history and points out the difference the issue makes in today's world and in the churches finally she shows that only a continuing belief in eternal life provides both the hope of the individual and our world the author boldly presents her own beliefs but does so with understanding of the conflicting interpretations of a wide range of alternative views
