this book explores how the writers poets thinkers historians scientists dilettantes and frauds of the long nineteenth century addressed the limit cases regarding human existence that medicine continuously uncovered as it stretched the boundaries of knowledge these cases cast troubling and distorted shadows on the culture throwing into relief the values vested interests and power relations regarding the construction of embodied life and consciousness that underpinned the understanding of what it was to be alive in the long nineteenth century ranging over a period from the mid eighteenth century through to the first decade of the twentieth century an era that has been called the age of science the essays collected here consider the cultural ripple effects of those previously unimaginable revolutions in science and medicine on humanity s understanding of being a lie says an american proverb will run from maine to mexico while truth is putting on its boots and the memories of few celebrated men have been more freely aspersed or more tardily vindicated than has that of edgar allan poe no sooner was the breath out of his body than his enemies addressed themselves to the congenial task of bespattering his reputation and continued to do so unchecked and almost unchallenged for many years amongst other charges so contemptible as to be unworthy of a moment s consideration he was held up to public execration as a confirmed inebriate and denounced as a shameless plagiarist at this distance of time it is hardly necessary to remark that the former charge was a particularly cruel perversion of the truth while the latter was entirely without foundation but it is a well known axiom that if only a sufficiency of mud is thrown some of it is sure to stick and in consequence poe was for a long time denied that place on the roll of fame to which his remarkable talents both as a poet and a romancer fairly entitled him the present generation however has witnessed a signal reaction in his favour thanks to the untiring efforts of several prominent men of letters both in his own country and in england the darker shadows which rested upon his name have been effectually dispersed the world has gradually come to take a more just view both of his character and his genius and in this the closing year of the nineteenth century we find poe s reputation more firmly established than at any time since his untimely death in 1849 to a right understanding of the works of any author some knowledge of his life is essential for a man s writings are always to a greater or less extent the reflection of his character and his surroundings of course there are exceptions to this as to other rules there are authors whose forte lies in describing the passions and the impossibility of controlling them and who in private life are confirmed misogynists while there are others whose most entertaining books have been dictated upon a bed of suffering from which there was little chance of their ever rising again but poe was not one of these exceptions in his writings and more especially in his poetry his character is mirrored for all men to behold it naturally of a morbid temperament poe's innate propensity to look upon the dark side of things was strengthened by the circumstances in which he was placed his life was one of continuous disappointment he laboured incessantly and hardly earned enough to keep body and soul together he was perhaps the most original genius of his time and was accused of pilfering from the work of vastly inferior minds he was intensely ambitious and remained a literary hack to the end of his days he was of a most affectionate disposition and was compelled to witness the one whom he loved best upon earth in the grip of a cruel and lingering disease without possessing the means of procuring her the comforts which might have alleviated her sufferings knowing all this can we wonder at the tone of settled melancholy which pervades his poetry the regret for what might have been the yearning for what can never be here and there it is true he strikes a different note as in Eulalie and the charming little lyric to Helen which latter poem however was written when he was still a boy but these variations like glimpses of blue sky on a dark and lowering horizon only serve to intensify the general gloom and yet in spite of their sadness there is a pathetic sweetness in his verses which appeals irresistibly to the heart and makes the reader fain to admit that in his particular strain poe is indeed a master born at boston on january 19th 1809 the son of one david poe a man of good family who had married an actress and subsequently adopted his wife's profession edgar allan poe had the misfortune to lose both his parents in infancy after which he was adopted by his godfather mr john allan a wealthy and childless richmond merchant with the intention it is thought of making him his heir the boy was handsome witty and precocious and was petted and indulged by his adopted father to his heart's content indeed it is to the injudicious treatment which he then received that poe himself ascribes many of the difficulties which beset his path in after life when eight years old he was brought to england and placed at a school at stoke newington kept by a dr bransby who is amusingly depicted in William Wilson one of poe's finest stories here he remained five years when he returned to america and after studying until he was seventeen at a richmond academy matriculated at the university of virginia at charlottesville at the university he seems to have acquired some reputation as a scholar but at the end of his first session a difference of opinion with his godfather in respect of some gambling debts which the old gentlemen very properly refused to pay led to an open quarrel and poe instead of returning to charlottesville set out for europe with the intention of assisting the greeks then struggling to free themselves from the intolerable yoke of turkey it does not appear however that he took any part in the war nor even beheld except in his mind's eye the remains of the glory that was greece after wandering about the continent for a couple of years he returned home became reconciled to mr allan and having expressed a wish to enter the army was accordingly nominated to a cadetship at west point but alas the imp of the perverse was ever at his heels and in less than twelve months he was cashiered for various neglects of duty and disobedience of orders
