this paper focuses on asset allocation decisions of life insurance companies in emerging markets mature market insurers allocate only a small fraction of their assets to emerging markets because of regulatory constraints rating pressures and currency risk however global insurers invest directly in emerging markets by setting up subsidiaries rather than through portfolio investment and this trend is increasing local insurers largely remain captive investors of local instruments and provide stability to the domestic securities market the regulatory regime and the liquidity and depth of local markets play an important role in asset allocation decisions of insurers insurance companies are increasingly adopting asset liability management and risk control measures however insufficiently developed local markets and regulatory interventions on the liabilities side often limit optimal asset allocation in most of the currency crises of the 1990s the largest output falls have occurred in those emerging economies with large currency mismatches a phenomenon that occurs when assets and liabilities are denominated in different currencies such that net worth is sensitive to changes in the exchange rate currency mismatching makes crisis management much more difficult since it constrains the willingness of the monetary authority to reduce interest rates in a recession for fear of initiating a large fall in the currency that would bring with it large scale insolvencies the mismatching also produces a fear of floating on the part of emerging economies sometimes inducing them to make currency regime choices that are not in their own long term interest morris goldstein and philip turner summarize what is known about the origins of currency mismatching in emerging economies discuss how best to define and measure currency mismatching and review policy options for reducing the size of the problem

this book written by specialists introduces a range of sociological traditions and how they can be used in investigating law and legal institutions a key element in the formal liberalisation of the global marketplace is the codification of relations between states and foreign investors such codification has become an essential complement to the existing elaborate rules governing trade flows since trade and investment increasingly complement each other this book presents a collection of papers that document the current state of international investor state relations examine the technical and theoretical issues underlying the need for multilateral rules on investment and discuss proposals for the content and process of such a rule making initiative topics of the papers consider such matters as existing investment instruments negotiation of an agreement on foreign direct investment lessons learned from nafta investment barriers private and public impediments to market presence and tax harmonisation
