why do we have children and what do we raise them for does the proliferation of depictions of suffering in the media enhance or endanger compassion how do we live and die well in the extended periods of debility which old age now threatens why and how should we grieve for the dead and how should we properly remember other grief and grievances in addressing such questions the christian imagination of human life has been powerfully shaped by the imagination of christ s life christ s conception birth suffering death and burial have been subjects of profound attention in christian thought just as they are moments of special interest and concern in each and every human life however they are also sites of contention and controversy where what it is to be human is discovered constructed and contested conception birth suffering burial and death are occasions in other words for profound and continuing questioning regarding the meaning of human life as controversies to do with ivf abortion euthanasia and the use of bodies and body parts post mortem indicate in the ethics of everyday life michael banner argues that moral theology must reconceive its nature and tasks if it is not only to articulate its own account of human being but also to enter into constructive contention with other accounts in particular it must be willing to learn from and engage with social anthropology if it is to offer powerful and plausible portrayals of the moral life and answers to the questions which trouble modernity drawing in wide ranging fashion from social anthropology and from christian thought and practice from many periods and influenced especially by his engagement in public policy matters including as a member of the uk s human tissue authority banner develops the outlines of an everyday ethics stretching from before the cradle to after the grave excerpt from the ethics of progress or the theory and the practice by which civilization proceeds there was never a time when the foundations of ethics seemed so obscure as they seem to many thinking people to day strange theories of conduct find currency and win disciples moral principles which once seemed fixed are called in question the moral questions at issue and the problems before civilized man take on a new scale of immensity and seriousness the design of this book is to set forth a simple philosophical and inspiring vital principle which governs all ethical questions and ensures the development of noble useful and happy character the treatment touches the great issues of human life the significance of conscience the problem of evil the supposed antagonism between freedom and necessity the effort is made to treat such questions without any theological or metaphysical prepossessions but simply from the study of the facts of consciousness the main object of the book is practical the author desires especially to help men in the art of the good life while he does not believe that the true is the same as the useful he believes that the true and the useful are at last one the good theory therefore shows itself good only so far as it is practical about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works the ethics of need agency dignity and obligation argues for the philosophical importance of the notion of need and for an ethical framework through which we can determine which needs have moral significance in the volume sarah clark miller synthesizes insights from kantian and feminist care ethics to establish that our mutual and inevitable interdependence gives rise to a duty to care for the needs of others further she argues that we are obligated not merely to meet others needs but to do so in a manner that expresses dignifying care a concept that captures how human interactions can grant or deny equal moral standing and inclusion in a moral community she illuminates these theoretical developments by examining two cases where urgent needs require a caring and dignifying response the needs of the elderly and the needs of global strangers those working in the areas of feminist theory women s studies aging studies bioethics and global studies should find this volume of interest
