for more than a decade Nina Baym has pioneered in the reexamination of American literature she has led the way in questioning assumptions about American literary history in critiquing the standard canon of works we read and teach and in rediscovering lost texts by American women writers Feminism and American Literary History collects fourteen of her most important essays published since 1980 which combining feminist perspectives with original archival research significantly revise standard American literary history in part i rewriting old American literary history the focus is on male writers essays range from close readings of individual works to ambitious critiques of the main paradigms by which scholars have conventionally linked disparate texts and authors in a narrative of nationalist literary history the self in the wilderness myth the romance novel distinction the myth of New England origins part ii writing new American literary history studies examples of women's writing from the revolution through the civil war stressing much overtly public and political writing that has been overlooked even by feminist scholars noting public and political themes in supposedly domestic works the essays substantially modify and historicize the paradigm by which premodern American women's writing is currently understood the contentious and influential essays in part iii two feminist polemics address feminist literary theory and pedagogy advocating a pluralist practice as the basis for scholarship criticism and humane feminism no one interested in American literature or in women's writing can afford to ignore Baym's revisionist work humorous and gracefully written this book is enjoyable and indispensable both Ernest Hemingway and F. Scott Fitzgerald grew up in the Midwest and were strongly influenced by romantic music anchored by the aesthetic tastes of the German immigrants who settled across that region. Hemingway's ear for form and Fitzgerald's penchant for lyricism stem from early and frequent exposure to such masters as Johannes Brahms and Franz Schubert. Nostalgia is typically associated with romanticism and the acoustic longing found in Hemingway and Fitzgerald's fiction resonates with it. Characterized in the narrative voices in Hemingway's Winner Take Nothing and Fitzgerald's Tender is the Night and other of their fiction from the early thirties, understanding that each writer has his own kind of musical biography charts new ways to read material we already think we know. Reading their work within a musical-historical context means acknowledging it as an extension of the 19th century; it means reading them as romantic modernists. This work reads each author's prose musically, considering how romantic music inspired their craft and distinguished their work through the pivotal juncture of the early to mid-1930s when each man faced an artistic crisis of conscience. Initial chapters provide background information in music history; following chapters focus on how the life of each author was shaped by music and how they worked with specific influences that grew out of steady interactions with it. Evidence of which is found in archival documents and collections.

New scholarly essays providing a multifaceted approach to the role of Africa in Hemingway's life and work.
