rudolf steiner was very critical of modern astrology in several lectures he emphasized that true astrology can only be practiced in a higher state of consciousness this leads to insights that are entirely in line with the world view of the planetary spheres the zodiac and even higher levels of existence originally seen clairvoyantly by the people of ancient cultures over the millennia however this knowledge has fallen into decay today s astrology is no longer based on true concepts of the zodiac and the house system this book describes the four stages of its decline and leads the reader back to its origins and true foundations the ancient spiritual world view with the angelic hierarchies is contrasted with the modern spiritless astronomical world view the reader also learns about the house system according to rudolf steiner all of this makes it possible to understand both the great significance of the egyptian sphinx of giza and the date set by rudolf steiner for the laying of the foundation stone for the first goetheanum according to cosmological aspects robert saler examines the small but influential death to the world movement in us eastern orthodox christianity presenting a case study in theological aesthetics saler demonstrates how a relatively small consumer phenomenon within us eastern orthodoxy sits at the centre of a variety of larger questions including the relationship between formal ecclesial and para church structures the role of the internet in modern religiosity consumer structures and patterns as constitutive of piety how theology can help us understand art and vice versa understanding death to the world as an instance of lived religion tied to questions of identity politics of religious purity relationships to capitalism and concerns over conspiracy theory helps us to see how studies of uniquely american eastern orthodox identity must address these broader cultural strands read a balanced well researched treatment of the end times interpreted from the christian east by faithful orthodox saints martyrs and spirit filled fathers of the faith historic christian teaching on the rapture the millennium the state of israel and the role of the church in the last days writers of novels plays and poems use their imagination with an evident freedom by contrast makers of christian doctrine seem to impose limits reducing the open ended meaning of images to exact concepts and summing up the loose ends of stories in one unified story but the author of this study sets out to show how images and stories in literature can actually help the theologian to make doctrinal statements while at the same time careful theological thinking can assist the critical reading of literary texts such a dialogue is worked out in studies of the poetry of william blake and gerard manley hopkins and the novels of d h lawrence iris murdoch and william going here the tension between the freedom of imagination and the limits of doctrine is seen to be only a part of more far reaching tensions of freedom in human life which account for a sense of fallenness and which a dialogue between literature and christian doctrine can do much to illuminate in all this the relationship between imagination and revelation is never far from the center of the discussion in volume four readers are exposed to the cornerstones of the early modern world from the age of the baroque to the art music and culture of the eighteenth century as in previous volumes the author presents lively discussion accompanied by literary excerpts and examples to illuminate a variety of topics including catholicism s global reach the birth of modern philosophy the political theories of hobbes and locke the enlightenment and the music of hayden and mozart to name a few
