argues that air intelligence played a crucial but largely overlooked role in the successful execution of the allied bombing campaigns against the third reich which in turn proved a decisive factor in both ending the war in europe and ending it as soon as it did for much of the twentieth century united grain growers was one of the major forces in canadian agriculture founded in 1906 for much of its history ugg worked to give western farmers a third way between the competing poles of cooperatives like the saskatchewan wheat pool and the private sector at its peak more than 800 ugg elevators dotted the canadian prairies and the company had become a part of western canada s cultural psyche by 2001 then known as agricore united it was the largest grain company on the prairies the ugg s history illuminates many of the intense debates over policy and philosophy that dominated the grain industry after the second world war it would be a key player as the western canadian grain industry expanded into new international markets through the rest of the century it played an important role in resolving major disputes over regulation and grain transportation policy despite its many innovations the company s final decade and eventual demise illustrated the tensions at the heart of the grain industry in 1997 to finance the rebuilding of its grain elevator network ugg went public and entered equity markets while successful at first this strategy also weakened the company s cooperative structure in 2007 it was purchased by saskatchewan pool in a hostile takeover the disappearance of agricore united marked the end of a century of voluntary farmer control of the grain business in western canada paul earl s history reveals ugg s central role in the growth and transformation of the western grain industry at a critical period with meticulous research supplemented by interviews with many of the key players he also delves into the details and the debates over the company s demise as politicians and judges argue over the original intent of our country s founding fathers the american founding itself continues to inspire a prodigious amount of research and commentary reflecting a bewildering array of methods and interpretations alan gibson now offers readers an insightful and convenient guide through this daunting and sprawling body of scholarship comprehensive and judicious interpreting the founding provides summaries and analyses of the leading interpretive frameworks that have guided the study of the founding since the publication of charles beard s an economic interpretation of the constitution in 1913 gibson argues that scholarship on the founding is no longer steered by a single dominant approach or even by a set of questions that control its direction he also examines the challenges posed to founding scholarship by this diversity and complexity and the possibilities opened by new avenues of inquiry that have recently emerged scholars of the founding including louis hartz bernard bailyn gordon wood and garry wills that best exemplify different schools of interpretation gibson focuses on six approaches that have dominated the modern study of the founding progressive lockean liberal republican scottish enlightenment multicultural and multiple traditions approaches for each approach he traces its fundamental assumptions revealing deeper ideological and methodological differences between schools of thought that on the surface seem to differ only about the interpretation of historical facts while previous accounts have treated the study of the founding as the sequential replacement of one paradigm by another gibson argues that all of these interpretations survive as alternative and still viable approaches each has simultaneously illuminated and masked core truths about the american founding he renders a balanced account of the current debate over the origins and foundations of the american republic and offers solid footing on the path to understanding the vast literature devoted to this important subject the effectiveness of education for sustainable development depends on the ability of schools and teachers to embrace pedagogies that reduce the gap between the rhetoric of education for the environment and the reality of classroom practices this book responds to the need to better understand the nature of the relationships between agency and structure that contribute to the development of educational rhetoric reality gaps in order to inform processes that most effectively facilitate pedagogical change this book explores the issues of pedagogical change through the experiences of australian primary school teachers faced with the challenge of implementing an environmental education program in which young students were positioned as active participants in the social processes from which environmentally sustainable practices could be developed these teachers were required to adopt pedagogies that often represented the antithesis of their well established teacher directed approaches through the use of anthony giddens theory of structuration this book provides unique perspectives of the teacher mediated manner in which certain elements of structure and agency interrelate to enable and constrain classroom practices essential understandings for school principals and educational policy developers who aim to effectively implement pedagogical change this book also demonstrates that the theory of structuration provides a valuable ontological research framework and provides social researchers with practical guidance for how to relate this theory to specific research issues models and reality in economics is an important contribution to the philosophy of economics and the conduct of inquiry in economics it examines what economists do and what economics is about the book opens with a critical discussion of the work of McCloskey and the rhetorical approach to understanding economics it then goes on to address the question of whether economics is a science in answering this question the author examines three main concepts first whether economics meets a methodological standard concluding that if the standard is not reached then it is a non science secondly whether economics has a certain kind of content such as a body of fundamental laws and finally whether it includes ideal theories or hypotheses which omit certain real world complications from this discussion the author suggests that the rhetorical approach and the question of whether economics is a science should be replaced with the idea that models are the central foundation of economic inquiry he goes on to discuss the character of economic models and the idea that much economic thinking is concerned with the construction of models to resolve conceptual problems and explain real world economic phenomena the book sheds new light on existing methodology and proposes new areas for future research models and reality in economics will be welcomed by those interested in the developments in economic methodology and philosophy and those concerned with the progress and prospects of economics in general this book compares and contrasts how different firms approach marketing within the same country it concerns issues revolving around marketing as a form of rhetoric and marketing as a living reality for firms who practice it and contains cutting edge thinking from expert commentators on the marketing scene worldwide it uses 16 case study examples of marketing practice in eight countries and shows whether marketing allegiance is openly proclaimed but in practice merely a rhetorical device or whether it is deeply embedded in organizational culture this collection of essays focuses on the relationship between ideas and practice rhetoric and reality with specific reference to gender in colonial india taking the period from about 1870 to the late 1930s it provides numerous case studies from bengali narratives about childhood and medical missionaries learning and teaching about birth control to a muslim modernist on women's rights and the professionalization of indian nursing to explore this historical moment when received perspectives on gender roles first began to interplay with colonial and indigenous discourses on the implications of modernity in the indian context in doing so it highlights three main themes domesticity the body and modernity in placing india at center stage rhetoric and reality attempts to do justice to the significant regional differences within the sub continent by including papers on a range of localities notably bengal punjab and central india it also seeks to balance attention and explore reciprocity and contestation between colonial and indian agency and reciprocity while subaltern agency is recovered in many of the papers through investigation of elite interfaces with servants pupils nurses and
