the atomic force microscope afm has become one of the leading nanoscale measurement techniques for materials science since its creation in the 1980 s but has been gaining popularity in a seemingly unrelated field of science biology the afm naturally lends itself to investigating the topological surfaces of biological objects from whole cells to protein particulates and can also be used to determine physical properties such as young s modulus stiffness molecular bond strength surface friction and many more one of the most important reasons for the rise of biological afm is that you can measure materials within a physiologically relevant environment i e liquids this book is a collection of works beginning with an introduction to the afm along with techniques and methods of sample preparation then the book displays current research covering subjects ranging from nano particulates proteins dna viruses cellular structures and the characterization of living cells undoubtedly the most comprehensive analysis of the role of culture and emergent practices in capacity building currently at hand d estrée and parsons have produced a commendable amalgamation and scrutiny of local cultural and indigenous mediation practices in a number of contexts that empower local people while interacting and integrating with western mediation models in a blend of hybridity the book is beautifully structured and will attract a wide readership including graduate and undergraduate students sean byrne director arthur v mauro centre for peace justice and professor peace conflict studies university of manitoba canada since late 1990s conflict resolution field has recognized the need to integrate culture in its processes this book goes beyond such theoretical recognition and provides empirical evidence and solid concrete cases on how local actors from a wide range of cultural contexts integrated their cultural analysis and tools in their own sustainable conflict resolution processes it also offers an effective set of guidelines and lessons learned for policy makers and peacebuilding practitioners on the need to deepen their reliance on local cultural practices of peace mohammed abu nimer professor of international peace and conflict resolution school of international service american university and founder and director of the salam peacebuilding and justice institute in washington dc usa the evolving identities of communities impacted by deep historical divisions and population migration in the context of life threatening resource shortages present opportunities and challenges for conflict transformation professionals at every level

d estrée and parsons respond to this challenge with a remarkable collection of stories from around the world that amplify the innovation in the field while capturing its history and complexity it serves as the bridge between mediation and peacebuilding that is so necessary today prabha sankaranarayan ceo mediators beyond borders international in this excellent book tamra pearson d estrée and ruth parsons and their impressive collection of case study authors have analysed four generations of conflict resolution transformation theory and practice they highlight the diverse ways in which the burgeoning field of conflict resolution theorists and practitioners mirrored the ascendance and now decline of the neo liberal western project first and second generation efforts were based on notions of possessive individualism rational choice theory and a general acceptance of the status quo culture was ignored or eliminated as were deeper questions of political and social inequality but more importantly there was an unwillingness to consider the power and the wisdom that resided in locality third and fourth generation conflict transformers on the other hand have engaged these deeper questions and focused more attention on emancipatory creative partnerships social and economic justice co learning and hybridised models flowing from external engagement with local wisdom this is a book that needs to be read by anyone interested in the transformative power of conflict resolution and long term social and political change kevin p clements professor chair and foundation director the national centre for peace and conflict studies university of otago new zealand while waves of scholarship have focused either on the value of presumed universal models or of traditional practices of conflict resolution curiously missing has been the recognition and analysis of the actual intermingling and interacting of western and local cultural practices that have produced new and emergent practices in our global community in this compilation of case studies the authors describe partnerships forged between local practice expertise and bearers of western institutional models to build innovative approaches to mediation and conflict resolution including stories of these experiences and the resulting hybrid models that emerged the book explores central questions of cultural variation and integration such as the perception of purpose and function of resolution processes attitudes toward conflict arenas and timeframes third party roles barriers to process use as well as how to remain true to culture and context it also examines partnership dynamics and lessons learned for modern cross cultural collaboration
