this book presents a first comprehensive typological analysis of noun phrases in australian languages covering the domains of classification qualification quantification determination and constituency the analysis is based on a representative sample of 100 languages among other points the results call into question the classic idea that australian languages tend to lack phrasal structures in the nominal domain with over two thirds of the languages showing evidence for phrasehood moreover it is argued that it may be more interesting to typologise languages on the basis of where and how they allow phrasal structure rather than on the basis of a yes no answer to the question of constituency the analysis also shows that a determiner slot can be identified in about half of the languages even though they generally lack classic determiner features like obligatory use in particular contexts or a restriction to one determiner per np special attention is given to elements which can be used both inside and beyond determiner slots demonstrating how part of speech and functional structure do not always align the book is of interest to researchers documenting australian languages as well as to typologists and theorists this book is the first monograph which provides a comprehensive discussion of the syntactic behaviour of old english oe adnominal adjectives drawing on the empirical data retrieved from the york toronto helsinki parsed corpus of old english prose taylor warner pintzuk beths 2003 the author proposes an analysis of oe adjectives by means of a theoretical apparatus couched in the framework of chomsky's generative grammar the analysis incorporates the following properties of oe adjectives – their inflectional patterning i.e. whether adjectives take – *oe*weak and – *oe*strong inflectional endings – the so called adjective stacking i.e. whether adjectives can occur in uninterrupted strings – the surface placement with respect to their complements – the surface placement with respect to the nominal head the author observes that the differences between prenominal and postnominal adjectives go far beyond the superficial difference in their surface placement she argues therefore that the two types of adjectives require two different theoretical treatments the volume consists of five chapters it is supplemented by four appendices and an extensive bibliography
